

Family caregivers are the unsung heroes of the life-saving drama that's triggered by major illnesses. Nearly three quarters of American households will find themselves caring for a loved one at a single point in their lives. This book interprets the journey of Meagan M. Thomas, a 23 year-old journalist who found herself in the center of a news story, when she left her job and became the full-time caretaker for her mother, who suddenly suffered a major illness. This is a daily devotional that captures the thoughts, feelings, and insight to what so many people in society experience when they trade in their lives to embark on an unexpected journey
